Turning challenges to opportunities with WealthSuite:

The ideal world for Wealth Managers:

Market background

Regulatory scrutiny, major player departures and pressure for greater transparency have set the ground for rapid transformation in the wealth management industry. Changes in demographics, technology, environment and social behaviours are shaping the face of the industry.

Competition

from existing large incumbents and overseas banks are still the most significant threat for Wealth Managers. But the landscape is changing with disruptive entries from non-traditional players, especially technology companies, and fintech start-ups.

Investors' preferences

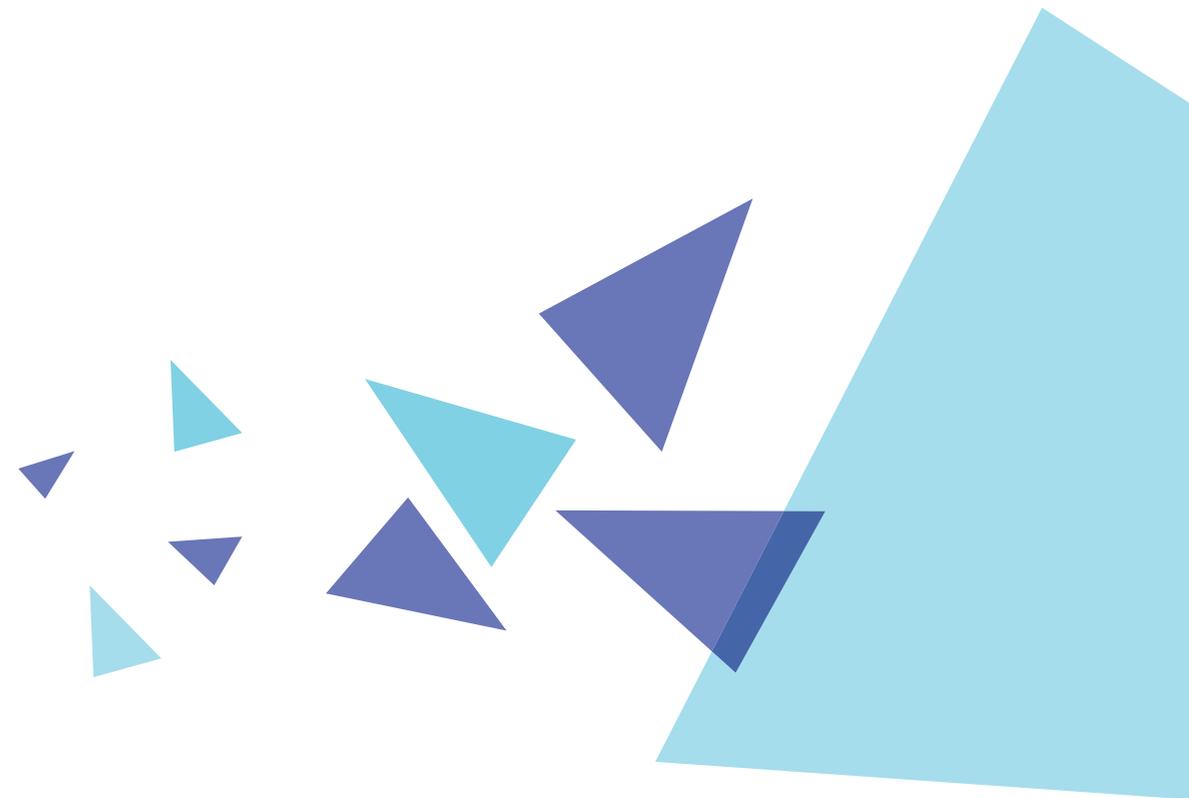

are changing. The next-generation will demand greater transparency, availability of wealth management digital channels and personal involvement in the investment decision making process.

Legacy systems and slow processes make operating models much more complex and time consuming. Data is siloed and often there is a gap between back office account-centricity and front office client-centricity making it hard to achieve a 'single client view' impacting quality of client service.

Digital technology is transforming financial services. Globalization of business requires advanced mobile digital solutions for wealth managers and investors. The wealth management industry is opening up to the digital evolution but not fast enough.

Top talent

is at the heart of the wealth management value chain. Wealth managers must attract and retain this key human capital by offering a competitive, modern, efficient work environment.

New regulation is slowing and no longer seems to be the biggest concern for banks. Still, regulatory pressure opened up the route to differentiation through technology innovation with wealth managers reviewing their product portfolios and structures.

Wealth Managers have a unique opportunity to review their business models, operating costs, customer services and value propositions to increase growth. Technology will be a key enabler of business agility and product innovation, delivering client-centric product solutions and improving operating costs.

Increased performance and revenue growth

WealthSuite increases productivity and counters margin pressures by automating the investment process. It gives you the means to efficiently monitor and manage your business, reduce costs and retain/attract advisors.

Temenos' comprehensive integration of client and portfolio data gives you all the relevant information at your fingertips, allowing you to focus on high-value-added tasks and exception management. This allows for prompt and efficient contact with prospects and clients helping increase productivity, substantially improve client service, obtain a greater "share of wallet" and increase your AUM.

Stronger customer loyalty

Thriving in this fast changing environment requires fast adaptation. Modern software can enable a faster response and a more personalized service for your clients. By offering a superior range of financial products and services via multiple channels, Temenos helps you attract and retain both the Next Generation investors and the more traditional clients.

Advanced digital capabilities

Travel requirements to meet with your clients are increasing. While travelling, you need to stay connected, prepare investment advice, and review your clients' portfolios and accounts. Investors on the other hand need to access the same data as they do when in their office, in real time.

They may need to access details about investment products, analyze the clients' situation, and create product simulations. They also need to know when an alert may be triggered, or an urgent action or decision is required. WealthSuite empowers you and your clients to access information on line, anytime, anywhere and seamlessly through multiple channels.

Cost and risk reduction

Temenos' technology allows for progressive renovation; you can install only the components of the WealthSuite portfolio that your business needs, integrating them at a pace comfortable to your organisation. Our approach helps to minimize the cost, time and risk of an implementation.
